

A Partnership in Learning

On April 11, 2013, eleven WaterStone Bank employees were privileged to share their financial expertise with every 4th grade student at Bruce Guadalupe Community School in celebration of financial literacy month. This opportunity was made possible through a partnership between WaterStone Bank and the United Community Center.

During this time, it was hard to tell who was having more fun—the children or the volunteers! In fact, while playing the “Who Wants to be a Super-Moola-Naire” Trivia Game, a lot of giggles could be heard throughout the school’s hallways. WaterStone volunteers then shared a story with the students about the life of a dollar bill.

Volunteers also made banks with the students and encouraged them to set a savings goal that day! Each student received some seed money, a crisp dollar bill, to deposit into their newly-made banks to kick-off their motivation to save. Some of the things the students wanted to save for were: video games, toys, and race cars! Most students said, however, that they were saving for college and even knew what college they hoped to attend! It looks like our future is in good hands!

For more information on how the United Community Center touches the lives of so many, please visit their Web site at: <http://www.unitedcc.org/Default/AboutUs.htm>

